Expresso
Espresso is a concentrated coffee made by forcing nearly boiling water through finely-ground coffee beans under high pressure. It has a rich, bold flavor and is typically served in small quantities (about 1 oz). As the foundation for many coffee drinks, espresso is known for its intense aroma and taste.
Iced Coffee
Iced coffee is brewed hot and then cooled down, usually served over ice. It can be made using regular drip coffee, espresso, or other brewing methods. Often sweetened and mixed with milk or cream, it's a popular refreshing drink, especially during warmer weather.
Cappuccino
A cappuccino consists of equal parts espresso, steamed milk, and milk foam, resulting in a creamy, balanced coffee drink. The foam layer on top gives it a light, airy texture. It's often served in smaller cups and has a stronger coffee flavor compared to milkier drinks like lattes.
